Prerequisites

Students who took one of the courses listed below will not be allowed to register to the course Introduction to Government (132):

848 - Introduction To Comparative Politics
8055 - Introduction to Goverment for Psychologists

Course Description

The course will examine main topics and research methods in Government and Comparative Politics. The topics include theories of democracy, development, historical evaluation of the state, nationality and ethnicity, the dynamics of regime change, study of institutions, bottom-up (civil society) and top-down (elites) processes, and the new challenges of globalization faced by the nation-state. Examples brought from different regions of the world and different periods in history will give the students a basis for comparative analysis.

Course Goals

To provide an overview of the field of study of Government and comparative politics, as well as the comparative method. And consequently, to provide students with the tools to analyze case studies using different theoretical frameworks.
