Course Goals

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- Perform an extensive online market analysis and conclude.
- Understand the different online marketing channels available and match them to a company’s specific needs.
- Design a balanced online marketing plan and determine measurable goals.
- Execute an online marketing plan as an in-house / outsource operation.
- Manage and measure the progress and performance of different online marketing channels.
- Implement a robust decision-making process based on acquired online marketing frameworks.

This course will not train its attendance for a specific specialist position such as SEO analyst or a PPC manager, but it will clearly outline the different units’ building blocks needed to make decisions and supervise projects under the online marketing & sales scope.

By examining each marketing channel to its depth, and by practicing a “hands-on” approach, the student will learn the “language of online marketing,” and will be able to better define and communicate his objectives to online marketing professionals.

The students will be exposed to real concurrent data from some of the largest online marketing accounts active today and will practice real-time case studies for domestic & international marketing campaigns.

Grading

The final course grade is based on a final group (3-4 students) project.
