Course Description

Course Description:

Changes in world politics and technological developments had expanded significantly the role of the media in diplomacy. International relations, to a large extent, takes place in the realm of communication and it involves public diplomacy, especially during conflicts in which a country's image serves as part of its national security. In the information age we live in, foreign policies cannot succeed without communications capabilities that have an impact on the way people, organizations and Governments perceive the events. The purpose of this course is to examine the management of public diplomacy by different political actors in the information age. We will discuss the changes in international relations as a result of technological developments; how does actors use the traditional media and the new media in order to promote their messages during conflicts; states' branding; the use of the internet by different actors (including terrorist organizations); and Israel's public diplomacy. During the course the students will conduct research dealing with different aspects of public diplomacy during conflicts.

Course Goals

Course Goals:

Provide the students with understanding regarding the realm of public diplomacy especially regarding conflicts. The students will engage with the topic, with conducting a research.
