Prerequisites

Students who took one of the courses listed below will not be allowed to register to the course American government and politics (4787):

4729 - American Politics

 Course Description

This course introduces central features of American politics and government at the national level.

Course Goals

The objectives of this course are for students to understand the basic “building blocks” in the American political System. We will consider the challenges faced by public officials as they attempt to meet a broad array of demands from the public, and consider why Americans feel discomfort with their government. My hope is that as you build an analytical perspective on American government that is informed, critical, and realistic, you will not resort to simplistic and self-defeating cynicism, no matter how trendy they may seem.

Grading

You are expected to attend lectures. The syllabus indicates the topics that will be covered in class. I expect you to read in advance. I may adjust the reading list (add, remove or change the order) as the course progresses. Although the lectures and readings reinforce each other, I do not summarize or discuss all the readings in class. You are responsible for the readings.

Final course grade will be based on the following assignments/exams:

- 2 assignments – 40% of final grade
 - Policy position paper (can submit in pairs) – 20% of final grade
 - analyze political opportunities for advancing a current policy
 - Public opinion paper (can submit in pairs) – 20% of final grade
 - executive summary – 5% of final grade
 - poster session (or power point presentation with voice over if we will not be able to meet in person) – 15% of final grade. Make sure you are present during the poster session, scheduled for December 22 during class hours. You should plan to be early to set up your poster. Every member of each poster-group needs to attend.
 - Final exam – 60% of final grade

 Tutor Office Hours

by appointment.

 Additional Notes

I have a no-screen policy in my classes. This will help you take part in class, participate, voice your opinion, and be involved. Write your notes in a notebook and leave the computer closed. You are not allowed to use your cellphone or any electronic device.

Why don't I allow such devices for taking notes? This post from BuzzFeed says it all: "11 Things You're Actually Doing on Your Laptop During a Lecture." A summary of research about this topic is available on the website.

 Reading List

All reading material will be available online and listed by the topic of each class.
