

Amit Loewenthal is a Senior Researcher at the Aaron Institute for Economic Policy, Reichman University, studying employment and higher education among Arabs in Israel. His main fields of interest are the political economy of violent conflicts, with the Israeli-Palestinian conflict as a case study of great significance, and socioeconomic inequality.

Several competitive grants and awards have recognized Amit's work. His dissertation won the Horowitz Institute Doctoral Scholarship in Economic and Social Development and the Yitzhak Rabin Award for research on peace and reconciliation.

Before joining Reichman, Amit was a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Potsdam and Tel Aviv University and has worked with various NGOs and think tanks, publishing several policy papers dealing with solutions for reducing poverty and economic gaps.

He holds a Ph.D. in Public Policy and an M.A. in economics from Tel Aviv University, and a B.Sc. in Biology from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He previously served as the Research Director at the Israeli Institute for Economic Planning.