

FOR FOUR-YEAR MEDICAL STUDIES

Reichman University was founded on the principles of excellence, entrepreneurship, and interdisciplinary education. In today's rapidly changing world, interdisciplinary training is more valuable than ever, equipping students with the skills needed to navigate change while broadening their personal and professional opportunities.

The Life Sciences Preparatory Program is tailored for current students and graduates with academic degrees. It includes the seven core prerequisite courses required for admission to four-year medical programs, as well as a dedicated preparatory course for the Medical Knowledge Exam.

All courses in the program are recognized by universities across Israel, and successful completion qualifies students to apply to four-year medical programs.

The program is offered in two tracks: Hebrew and English. The English track includes an optional on-campus Hebrew Ulpan for students who wish to improve their Hebrew proficiency in preparation for medical studies.

The program is structured as a one-year track, but students have the option to complete the coursework over a longer period, depending on their individual needs.
